Housing Legislation Law Decrees Is Sent To President Planes Must

AttemptByGOP To Cut Measure Fails In Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress sent to President Kennedy Wednesday his omnibus housing bill, one of the top-priority administration measures.

The loan and grant authorization is estimated at $5.6 billion by Democrats, but at more than $9 billion in ultimate effect by Republicans.

The House completed legislative action by voting 221-176 for the compromise within an hour after the Senate passed it 53-38. A last-minute Republican effort to cut the measure by $1.6 billion failed in the Senate.

The bill authorizes loans and grants for a variety of housing

Heart Of The Bill

Included is a provision for families of moderate income to buy homes worth up to $15,000 with a low down payment and a 35 to 40year mortgage. Sponsors called this the heart of the bill.

The vote came after some Republicans and Southern Demo crats bitterly attacked the compromise as extravagant, inflationary and worse than the original Senate version.

The main provisions of the bill income bracket may buy homes up to $15,000 with a down payment of 3 per cent on a 35-year mortgage. These Federal Housing Authority mortgages could be extended to 40 years for families that have a difficult time meeting payments on a 35-year mort

To Negotiate High Officials Say U.S. May Take Lead

WASHINGTON (AP) - Topranking U.S. officials said Wednesday the West may take the initiative in calling a conference with Soviet Russia on Germany and Berlin.

In Calling Meeting

They said this possibility was one of those under consideration among the Western Allies.

This report from high officials, who could not be identified, came after President Kennedy and Soviet Premier Khrushchev traded new warnings on Berlin but opened the door to negotiations.

The U.S. officials said the advantage of taking the initiative in calling a conference might be in getting a chance to choose those who will go to the conference

The United States is consulting with its allies to set up plans to meet any contingency, the U.S. officials said. These consultations are expected to continue during the rest of the summer and in the fall, the sources said. 'K" Could Move Up Deadline While Khrushchev has set a deadline for the end of this year on his plans to sign a separate peace treaty with East Germany, the U.S. officials said they are not excluding the possibility that he will move earlier.

They've stopped promising total segregation.

They're still catering to the rural voter - disproportionally powerful under Georgia's unique county-unit system —with promises of "road money."

But almost every Georgian fears there will not be enough road money or enough funds to meet teacher salaries and other needed government services unless the state gets more and more new industry.

Byrd For Industry

Byrd has pegged his campaign on this. Through his Senate Government Operations Committee he launched "Project Progress," throwing the state's resources behind a campaign to "save" two dying rural areas of the state.

Byrd promised to go anywhere in the nation that any local Chamber of Commerce asks him to go to try to grab a new industry. Byrd unveiled a plan to abolish a 3 per cent use tax to improve the state's competitive tax outlook for industry prospects. Byrd promised to pump more money into State Commerce Department research and advertising. He also promised more industrial research in universities.

Griffin has been silent, while Byrd has been rattling his industry drums on his civic club campaign tour. New industries have failed to march to the drumbeats, and Griffin is waiting for the is sues to ripen.

Contest Over The Sahara

More than national pride is at stake in the French-Algerian contest on the one hand to keep and on the other hand to gain control of the Sahara. Proved petroleum reserves of 3.5 billion barrels lie beneath Saharan sands, also deposits of natural gas, iron, and uranium. Former French Premier Guy Mollet estimated in 1957 that in ten years Saharan oil could supply onehalf of Europe's petroleum needs.

The Algerians want these resources for their own when independence is achieved. But other nations bordering the Sahara now seem disposed to assert a claim and France will not readily relinquish control. A recent joint communique by Tunisia and Mali asserted that the Sahara is an "integral part of African territory," not Algerian territory. Louis Joxe, French Minister for Foreign Affairs, has agreed that the nations surrounding the Sahara must be taken into consideration in deciding the region's future.

The Saharan impasse was one of the reasons for suspension on June 13 of the French-Algerian peace talks at Evian-les-Bains. A subsequent statement by the chief delegate of the National Liberation Front that "the Sahara is Algerian" has done nothing to brighten prospects for resumption of the negotiations in advance of the June 28 deadline set by the French.

The Sahara's value is not purely economic. For the rebels, it represents seven-eighths of the area of Algeria; for France, it provides perhaps the only place where its new nuclear weapons can safely be tested.

The Cuban Story

The most complete account of the Cuban fiasco that has yet been published appeared in an article in "The Saturday Evening Post" by Stewart Alsop. He entitles it "The Lessons of the Cuban Disaster." might more correctly be called, "The American Disas-

As one reads this account, it becomes obvious that while plotting and planning is a pleasant occupation, the implementation may be unrelated to reality. That inevitably leads to disaster.

First of all, it must be recognized that the attempt to invade Cuba and take over the government was an American enterprise. There is no use denying that, Many Americans would have been proud. It was organized and managed by the CIA; it should have been the task of the Marine Corps. If there was to be any kind of intervention, it should have been open and direct. The American mind does not lend itself to the trickiness employed in the Cuban affair.

The trouble seems to have been that the plan was devised by the CIA during the Eisenhower Administration; that Admiral Arleigh Burke and General Lyman Lemnitzer, of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, endorsed the plan under certain conditions. As one reads Alsop's article, which represents by far the most complete study of the situation, it becomes evident that President Kennedy has inordinate respect for experts, his assumption being that the professional must know more than the layman or the amateur. This can be extremely costly to him because the expert often becomes a fanatic.

"The men responsible for mounting a major covert operation like the Cuban landings must not also be responsible for judging the operation's chances of success or failure. Those chances must be assessed instead - and with a cold and fishy eye - by experts who are in no way involved in the operation, and who have their own independent sources of information.'

Alsop attempts a psychological study of why this should be so. Such profundity is unnecessary; experience shows that an outside, disinterested, objective opinion is useful. In business lawyers, outside engineering firms, public relations counsels, management analysis firms are brought in to check on a situation. An outside look often seems necessary. Government officials tend to judge themselves, which is never good

According to Stewart Alsop, President Kennedy's "new boys" were less favorably disposed toward the CIA's plan but were unwilling to set themselves up against the pros. He says that Secretary of State Dean Rusk and adviser McGeorge Bundy had misgivings and that Senator Fulbright and Arthur Schlesinger Jr. were sharply opposed, Fulbright saying so outright but Schlesinger being somewhat quiet about it, which is astonishing

There has been an element of childishness about the entire activity in the assumption that such an enterprise, with men drilling in camps, could be kept secret, The preparations were in the making. Anyone in Miami who knew Cubans knew what was going on. Here in New York, the projected invasion was openly discussed. There were even quarrels among the Cuban revolutionary organizations because it was felt that the CIA's judgment as to who should be supported was not cor-

The President throughout was opposed to direct American intervention which meant that the correct plan was doomed to failure. It is unfortunate that those who enjoy the President's confidence and who opposed the CIA nonsense did not fight hard for their point of view. There is another side to this which Stewart Alsop states:

"Bobby Kennedy, who hates failure more even than most Kennedys, was present. He remarked, as the sad meeting ended, (about the Cuban debacle) that what worried him most was that now nobody in the Government would be willing to stick his neck out, to take a chance, to plan bold and aggressive action against the Communists.

"Surely the President's brother was essentially right. If the Communists are permitted indefinitely to retain their present monopoly of the techniques of the oblique thrust, the invasion by prexy, they will win in the end all over the world."

This is essentially true. After our failure in Cuba, we lost in Laos and we lost at the disarmament conferences at Geneva. It is impossible to take a small loss in the present big game. Every failure is an enormous failure and will produce bitter fruit. Some errors are historically uncorrectable. (Copyright 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Kennedy, Goldberg Were Reluctant To Invoke T-H Act Against Seamen

WASHINGTON - Several significant conferences took place between President Kennedy and his Secretary of Labor before the White House invoked the Taft-Hartley Act against the striking maritime unions.

Both men were reluctant to invoke the act. Arthur Goldberg, as a labor attorney, had spent a good many years fighting against Taft-Hartley, and put up a brililant argument against it in the steel strike case in the U.S. Supreme Court. Kennedy, as a Congressman, voted against Taft-Hartley, and was elected President partly through labor sup-

During their conference, Goldberg, as Secretary of Labor, told Kennedy, as President, that it would be possible to settle the strike by passing the wage hike on to the American taxpayer, since the U.S. government through subsidies, pays 80 per cent of the cost of American steamship lines.

However, Goldberg immediately went on to recommend against this: and Kennedy immediately concurred

So the Secretary of Labor, once the champion of labor as its attorney, and the President, once the battler for labor as Congressman and Senator, proceeded to invoke the law that labor hates most-Taft-Hartley.

shipping industry will have to face before the strike is settled. They are:

Basic Fact No. 1-American labor has gradually priced itself off the high seas. Seamen's wages have become so high, compared with those of foreign lines, that the American merchant flag has dropped from 1,723 active vessels in 1948 to 932 in 1961 - and the latter are kept affoat only by very heavy government subsidy.

During the period when I served as a merchant seaman on the old Admiral Line across the Pacific in 1922, seamen's wages were $45 a month. Today they are $400 a

Today, one demand of the striking seamen is that each member of the crew on new vessels have a stateroom to himself, instead of two men to a stateroom. In my day, 30 men bunked together in tiers in the fo'c'stle. Another demand by the striking seamen today is that when merchant crews are transported from one port to another overland to join another ship, they travel first Russian Diplomats traveling to Cuba to serve as advisers to Fidel Castro, travel air coach. But Joe Curran's Maritime Union now demands first-class air travel.

Chief stumbling block in the dispute, however, is jurisdiction over the captive vessels - chiefly those of Liberia, Honduras and Panama, owned by American oil companies.

Here again, labor could price itself off the high seas. For the oil companies can easily shift to Japanese-Creek-or Italian - owned vessels if labor costs go too high. It would be a simple matter for an oil company to sign a contract with a Japanese company to carry its oil. All that Japanese company needs do is take the contract to a bank and get financing for a new fleet of tankers, wholly Japanese-owned and Japanese-manned, to carry American oil. This is what President Kennedy and Secretary Goldberg had in mind when they decided that there must be a showdown in the maritime industry.

Basic Fact No. 2-Part of the trouble in the shipping industry is rivalry between two maritime union leaders: They are: Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union and Paul Hall, president of the Seafarers International Union. Three other unions have joined them in the strike, althogether they represent only about 70,000 men. However, competition for members is just as keen as competition for sales between retail firms. There is no monopoly agreement between them such as between General Electric, Westinghouse, and other big electrical companies. There is tough competition.

Because of this competition. both Hall and Curran are out to show their members that they can get the most out of the shipping industry. This is one of the reasons for the strike.

Note - One of the backstage figures in the strike is Lee Pressman, former counsel to John L. Lewis when he was head of the CIO, who later confessed that he had been active in the Communist Party. Pressman, no longer a Communist, now represents the Marine Engineers, who are aligned with the Seafarers. Pressman has shown much more disposition to settle the strike than other union leaders. Needed-A Strong Man

What labor needs most today is a strong leader to knock heads together and tell certain union chiefs to put the good of the nation ahead of the good of their own union.

John L. Lewis; in his heyday, was able to do this. The bushybrowed veteran of many labor battles did not hesitate to step into other labor disputes and demand the end of disputes which were hurting the country or the labor movement.

Phil Murray, former United Mine Worker official and a founder of the CIO, was also able George Meany has equal stature, but also has a temper. Meany flies off the handle, is not a good negotiator.

There is no strong wise man in the ranks of labor today who can tell the maritime unions that they are hurting their own cause as well as the nation.

The Wholesome Kick

By John Crosby

This is, I admit, a shameful confession. It's all right to lust after Lolita. But for a grown man to enjoy this snubbed-nose, freckledfaced 13-year-old girl is positively indecent.

I must admit I had to be dragged to "Pollyanna" by my then 11-year-old daughter. For a man my vintage to be seen entering a movie called "Pollyanna"-well, I wore dark glasses, looked both ways to be sure I was unobserved, and then scuttled into the movie house. I loved "Pollyanna." I don't care who knows it. Of course, it got a little sticky there at the end but, on the whole, it was delightful.

And little Miss Hayley Mills with that tomboy grin and her habit of walking with one shoulder lower than the other, and her freckle-faced charm, she kills me. She also kills all 12-year-old girls. My daughter saw it four times. "Pollyanna," the industry seems to feel, laid an egg. Actually, it grossed $3,500,000, which is a perfectly respectable sum of money, although a little disappointing to the Walt Disney office which expected a blockbuster.

Since that time I have seen little Miss Mills in "Tiger Bay," a psychological thriller in which she tears your heart out, and in her current picture "The Parent Trap," which is terribly funny, touching and unabashedly sentimental. I had my kids with me and everyone else had their kids with them and I haven't heard belly laughs like that since-well, "The Absent-Minded Professor," another of Walt Disney's paeans to innocence.

"The Parent Trap," beautifully written and directed by David Swift who did the same for "Pollyanna," is a strong story about a couple of twins who don't even suspect each other's existence. They meet at camp and well-go see it. I'm not going to tell you the plot except to say that it has one and they're very rare. Miss Mills is part tomboy, part colt, a marvelous little actress, the only 13-year-old girl on stage or screen who can say, "Thank you, father," as if she means it. Politeness doesn't come easy to this generation.

The returns are not in on "The Parent Trap," which has only opened in five cities, but it's doing all right. I have an idea that Miss Mills' pictures aren't the I'm crazy about Hayley Mills. blockbusters they ought to be because the adult population has been so conditioned that it's ashamed of innocence. Still, there are all kinds of signs that wholesomeness is very good box office.

"The Absent-Minded Professor," starring Fred MacMurray and Nancy Olson, both symbols of wholesomeness has grossed $9,-000,000 already and that is a nice round sum. As a matter of fact. it came within $5,000 of breaking the Music Hall record set by another terribly innocent picture, "Please Don't Eat the Daisies." Another of Disney's really innocent pictures, "Shaggy Dog," also grossed $9,000,000 in this country. So things are looking Understand, I'm not pushing innocence because it's good for you or good for the children. I'm pushing "The Parent Trap" because it's a hell of an entertaining picture and I think "One Eyed Jacks" and "The Misfits" and some of the other adult sex-andviolence-ridden tripe on display are so dull and so awful I can't sit through them. I'm not saying that dirty movies are not going to continue to make dough because quite clearly they are. But frankly, I find most of them childish. ("One Eyed Jacks" is a dull Western in which Marlon Brando exhibits some pretty terrible direction but, also, surprisingly some awful acting.) The wholesome kick extends to the theater, too. Out in Cleveland "The Sound of Music," which is just pure unvarnished goodness (my goodness, what goodness!) has just set a box-office record accruing $251,000 for four weeks which unhorsed the previous champ, "The Music Man," another pillar of respectability.

"The Cleveland Plain Dealer" noted editorially: "It's worth observing that both these shows were extremely clean and warmhearted affairs. They were entirely free of the current scourges of many Broadway productions and many films-obsessions with sex, prostitution, perversion, obscenity, and violence."

Frankly, I think wholesomeness is hot box-office because of sheer shock value. Of course, it's still not fashionable to admit you like it. You got to sneak in and enjoy yourself in the dark, as if you were attending a peep show.

Quarantine Might Be Answer For Berlin for a short time of material

WASHINGTON - The world is talking of war over Berlin - as if there may be no other way out. But there is a way, and it doesn't involve the firing of a single shot. It is a way that was proclaimed in the famous "Quarantine" speech in October 1937 by the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt. If it had been accepted then by America's allies, there might have been no second world war. The idea behind the policy was stated by Mr. Roosevelt as follows:

"It seems unfortunately true that the epidemic of world lawlessness is spreading.

"When an epidemic of physical disease starts to spread, the community approves and joins in a quarantine of the patients in order to protect the health of the community against the spread of the disease.' It would, of course, require courage and determination, plus a sacrifice on the economic side, to apply an effective "quarantine." But that's far less painful than the destruction of human life in a nuclear war. The formula means today a notification by the West to the Soviet Union that, if it moves to violate any of the agreementssuch as on the status of Berlinentered into by the Allies with Russia at the close of World War II. ther all wartime agreements will be considered subject to revision. This could mean a pronouncement that the Russian zone in Germany-and, indeed, the power the Soviet Union exercises over Poland, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Albania, Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia would no longer be recognized. Diplomatic relations would be severed and ambassadors or ministers withdrawn from every country behind the Iron Curtain with which the United States or its allies maintain diplomatic relations. This would also frustrate any plans to recognize Red China. All trade with the Soviet Union would be embargoed, and all embassies, legations and consulates

The Western world has thus far been thinking only of the contingency of military war. Nikita Khrushchev has assumed that the West wouldn't dare to resist his aggression in West Berlin because the alternative would be war. But a far more dangerous situation would confront him if the Western Allies unitedly determined to apply the "quarantine" id eaand would have nothing further to do with the Soviet Union until it began to honor its pledged word given at the close of World

The time would become ripe for those demonstrations which a people bent on liberation would naturally initiate as economic pressure rises due to the isolation of the Soviet Union. The Russian people, too, would become worried about the recklessness of the man in the Kremlin who prates about his peaceful intent but goes to the brink of war - a step which could involve miscalculation and suddenly send missiles and hydogen bombs into action.

The practical question that must be answered first, however, is whether the Allies are willing to make the sacrifice necessary to carry out a "quarantine" policy. It would mean a blow to the economy of Europe and would, of course, disrupt trade in various cluding that this is the beginning of the end. A person can live for decades with angina pectoris, even though a segment of an artery is plugged. Tablets, such as nitroglycerine, relieve tightness and others dilate the artery and encourage an adequate flow of blood into the heart muscle. The best advice is to avoid conditions that bring on attacks of angina. If chest pain occurs after walking two blocks; stop and rest for a moment after walking a block and a half.

Some develop discomfort only when exertion follows a meal, This calls for rest after eating; or take a nitroglycerine before venturing out of doors. The emotional upheavals that trigger pain are more difficult to control unless the victim shies away from situations that bring on stress, excitement, or anger.

But this is only part of the story. The artery is narrowed because the wall is thickened. Unless the hardening process is retarded, the circulation may become so sluggish the blood clots and obstructs the vessel (coronary thrombosis). Conditions such as high blood pressure, obesity, diabetes, and stress hasten the arteriosclerotic process and should be controlled.

Medications, hormones, and dietary factors help lower a high blood cholesterol. The right kind of exercise stimulates the development of new blood vessels that will bypass obstructed arteries. The sensible approach to this problem is regular exercise in keeping with age and the status of the heart. A little every day is beneficial whereas too much once a week is likely to be dang-

Eleventh CCC Invitation Golf Tournament Opens Today

Mrs. Hughes Seeks Third Leg On Bowl

36-Hole Test Ends Friday; 69 Women To Tee Off Today

Women golfers from West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia will tee off this morning as the first half of the 36-hole Invitation Tournament of the Cumberland Country Club gets under way with 69 entries.

This is the eleventh year for the event in which The Old Export Bowl is the big prize and goes to the player with the low gross score on Friday evening when the two-day test draws to a close.

Seeks Third Title

Mrs. Barbara Diggs Hughes, of Richmond, Va., is the defending champion and if she wins the tournament for the third time the Old Export Bowl will become her permanent possession. Mrs. Hughes, the Middle Atlantic Golf Association's 1961 champion, won here in 1959 with a score of 159 and last year she gained the second leg on the trophy by posting a 154, the lowest in six years of 36-hole tournaments.

The first Old Export Bowl was won by Mary Ann Downey, of Baltimore, who captured the 1953, 1954 and 1955 tournaments.

The first five CCC invitationals, 1951 through 1954, were 18-hole affairs. The 1953 event attracted a record 145 players but the entry list was cut with the introduction of 36-hole tournaments in 1955 and the field limited to players with handicaps of 25 and under.

Mrs. Hughes and Mrs. John McCuskey are the only past champions entered in this year's tourney. Mrs. McCuskey was the 1951 winner and had her name inscribed on the bowl retired by Miss Downey.

The names of Capt. Lucille Busch (1956), Mrs. Maurice Belt Red Sox Richards (1958) appear on the current bowl along with Mrs. By 11-6 Score Hughes, who was Miss Barbara Diggs.
